DEFINITIONS

Home station – A station that is operated from a fixed position. It does not need to be a home domicile. Club stations are considered home stations.

Mobile station – A station that is capable of operation while moving. Moving is defined as travel in a legal manner on highways. The radio must be one that is configured for operation inside a motor vehicle. The antenna must be of a type generally accepted as a mobile antenna. Mobile stations are not required to be in motion while operating.

Portable station – A station that is set up for the purpose of temporarily operating in the party from a non-fixed location, with the intention of teardown in the post party period. Typical of a portable station would be operations from a camp cabin, tent, pavilion, campsite, motel, etc. Check with owners/local authorities to ensure you have authorization to operate from your selected location. Antennas are not restricted, but are typically more home station like. Portable stations are not restricted in their power source. Battery, generator, or commercial mains is acceptable.

Rover station – A station that is capable of moving from one place to another, but is typically using a radio and antenna that are set up on site, then torn down and moved to another site. Rovers do not operate as a mobile while en route between operating locations.

QRP station – A station operating at a power level of 5 watts or less. QRP may be operated on any station setup capable of operation at 5 watts or less. To qualify for the QRP division, the entire party must have been run at QRP level.

Certificates will be awarded to the first-place finisher for each Entry Division in each U.S. State, each of the 13 Canadian Provinces, and each DX entity with an overall champion awarded for the DX category.
